Spotlight: Asian/Pacific Islander Women

An overview of Asian/ Pacific Islander (API) Women’s Concerns, Priorities, and Experiences of Discrimination

YWomenVote2020—YWCA’s 3rd national survey of women in the United States—provides a comprehensive examination of women’s concerns, experiences, and priorities. With its in-depth focus on women whose voices are critical yet frequently overlooked in policy discussions, YWomenVote2020 frames clear expectations for legislative action that are held by women of color, Gen Z (age 18-22) and Millennial women (age 23-38), and white rural women. A WOMAN’S RACE IMPACTS HER CONCERNS

API women often have higher levels of worry about many safety, caregiving, health, and economic concerns. They are especially more concerned caring for family members as they age, mass shootings and gun violence, white nationalism, and climate change.

Issues where Asian/Pacific Islander Women are More Likely to be Very Worried	Asian/Pacific Islander	All Women	Difference
Keeping you and your family safe from mass shootings*	68	52	16
Keeping you and your family safe from gun violence*	61	45	16
Having affordable and secure health insurance for your family*	57	47	10
Being able to care for your spouse, parents or other relatives as they age*	56	37	19
Having a medical expense for you or your family that you cannot afford*	54	45	9
The consequences of white nationalism and hate on your children, family or community*	53	38	15
Climate change impacting your community and the security of your family	53	35	18

*Split sampled

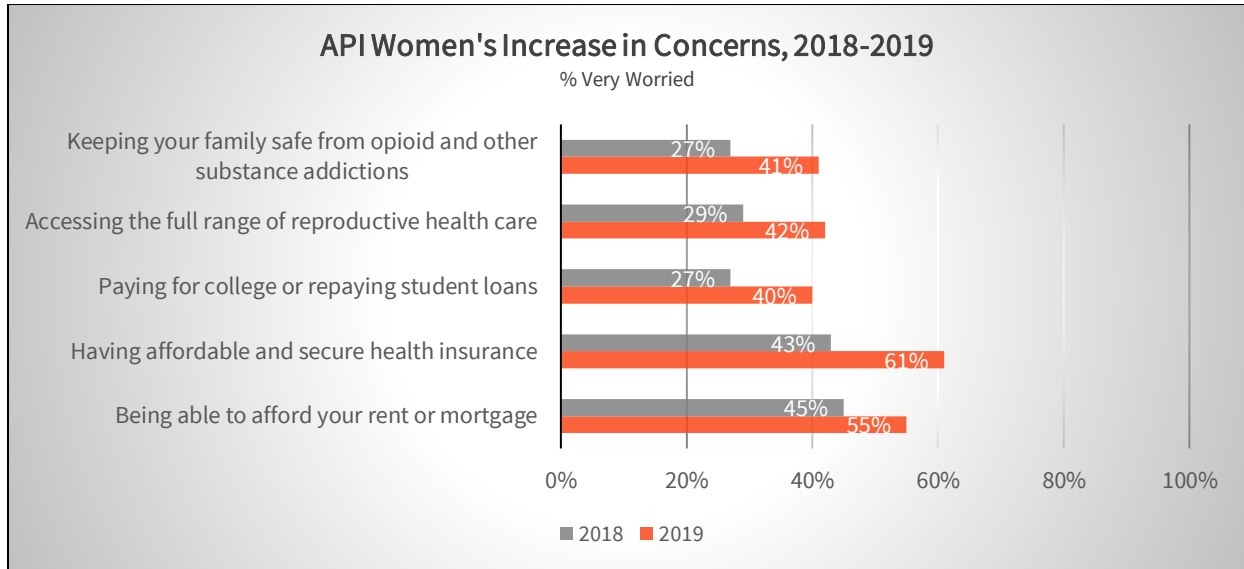

API women’s intense concerns about caring for aging relatives, white nationalism, climate change, and the ability of their income to match their bills is especially notable in comparison to white women.
